

The Department for Education are recruiting for new children's social care advisory boards!

Has children's social care played a role in your life and are you passionate about making it better?

Join us and add your voice!

NCB are recruiting for two children's social care advisory boards who will attend meetings from January 2024 initially until March 2025. The boards will give young people who have experience of children's social care the opportunity to speak out about their experiences. They will advise the Department for Education on their plans to reform children's social care and play a role in making it better.

What will you gain?

- Get to meet and work with new people
- Get to share your views and ideas
- Gain new skills
- Contribute to the reforms to children's social care

Who can apply?

- Aged 11-25 who have ever had a social worker
- Living in England
- Willing to take part in 3 in-person meetings a year in London
- Willing to take part in regular online meetings

To apply please complete this application form or email participation@ncb.org.uk to apply via video/audio or for more information.
